PUBLISHED AND EDITED BY HENRY M. WHITNEY.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 17, 1877. We are pleased to learn from Mr. S. T. Alexander, that the work of digging the ditch for the purpose of irrigating the lands of the Haiku and adjacent plantations, is already two thirds done. Nearly two hundred men have been steadily at work on it for the last few months, and it is expected that by the first of May next the water will be flowing through it. There could not be a more striking exhibition of the value of enterprise than is presented by the fact that this ditch, which will not cost above $50,000, will, it is estimated, cause a difference in the crop of the Haiku plantation now growing, of four hundred tons of sugar, which is more than sufficient to cancel the entire cost of the ditch.

We have been in the past too slow, too timid, too conservative. We have been to much afraid of risking a small amount for the sake of gaining a large one. We know that enterprise mays in other lands, but we have heretofore virtually professed to doubt its paying here. It is time that this fallacy were overthrown. We hope to see the example set by the projectors of the East Mani irrigating canal, prove contagious, and incite to many a new undertaking, which shall enrich individuals, and tend to the prosperity of the whole country.

Facts Worth Remembering

THE present uncertainty regarding the Prethe first time the same thing has happened in its history. As far back as the year 1801, Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr, both canthe voting is done by States, a majority of the | These we insert below. election proceedings in the House occu-Vice-President. As may well be imagined the popular excitement was most intense, rendered more so by the well known character of Burr, who had he become president might have proclaimed himself dictator.

Again, in the year 1825, there was no choice of President by the people, and after the examination by the Senate of the electoral votes cast, it was decided that the election devolved A. Fernander, land of Ohia 20 years, $25 per an- in the House of Representatives, where, on the first ballot, John Quincy Adams was chosen. Singularly enough, John C. Calhoun was chosen by the people as Vice-President and declared legally elected without the intervention of the House.

Again, in 1837, Martin Van Buren was elected President, and there was no Vice-President chosen by the people; whereupon the Representatives, voting by States, chose Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky, for that office. Thus it will be seen that the election of both President and Vice-President has been Licenses Expiring in January, 1877 thrown into the House of Representatives, where it has been settled satisfactorily and acquiesced in by all parties. Another point to which we wish to call the attention of our readers is the fact that a majority of the popular votes is not necessary to elect a President, as the following instances will show: Mr. Adams, in 1824, had a minority of the popular vote, so also did Van Buren in 1836, Polk in 1844, Taylor in 1848, Buchanan in 1856, and Lincoln in 1860. All these filled the office of President, though they received less than a majority of the popular votes cast. So in the election of last November, Mr. Tilden received about 250,000 majority, out of the 8,500,000 votes cast by the people, and yet fails to secure a majority in the electoral college, as did Breckenridge in 1860. The same occurred when Buchannan was elected in 1856. He went in, though having received 377,000 less than his rival J. C. Fremont. Yet in the electoral college, all these Presidents, except Adams, received a majority of the electoral votes. He was chosen by the Representatives, as stated

A Cosmical Work

By the last mail comes the important intelligence that the Board of Army Engineers to which was submitted the task of ascertaining the most feasible route for a ship canal across the Isthmus of Darien, has made a full and satisfactory report. It favors the Nicaragua route, and estimates the cost of the canal at about $100,000,000, which, considering the immense importance of the undertaking, and its undoubted benefits to the com-approval. All the facts and figures will soon be made public in a message from the President to Congress.

The canal will start on this side from the small village of San Juan del Sur, which lies at the head of a beautiful but open bay. It will probably be found necessary to construct at this point moles or breakwaters for the purpose of affording a safe and convenient harbor for shipping, as the bay is now exposed to the full force of the sea when the wind blows from certain directions. From San Juan del Sur to Lake Nicaragua, at Virgin Bay, is a distance of thirteen miles. The rise from the ocean to the lake is gradual, the latter lying at a height of 128 feet above the Pacific, and there is nothing to prevent the canal from being cut in a nearly direct line. The lake is deep enough to permit the navigation of the largest ships, being generally from five to fifteen fathoms in depth. It is about ninety miles in length by forty in width. The canal on the other side will follow the course of the San Juan river, through which the surplus waters of the lake are now drained. It starts near the southeastern point of the lake, and running a nearly easterly course empties into the Caribbean Sea at Greytown. This river is brand but shallow, and at present is navigable for nothing larger than the flat-bottomed steam-boats, which, a few years since, were used in the transit of passengers traveling between New York and San Francisco. It will be necessary to deepen it for nearly the whole of its length, avoiding the rapids of Castillio by a cut across the bend made by the river at that place. At Greytown there is at present no anchorage for ships, except in the open roadstead, and there will undoubtedly be constructed at that place an artificial harbor.

A ship canal by this route has long been in contemplation, and as long ago as the year 1819, a contract for the performance of the andertaking was entered into by the Nicaraguan government and the Atlantic and Pacific Ship Canal Company of New York, but owing to the interference of the British government the work was indefinitely postponed. It was estimated at that time that it would cost about $20,000,000, and that the time required for its completion would be twelve years.

There is hardly a civilized nation on the face of the earth that will not feel the benefits of "this correction of geography in the interest of commerce." It will bring the East and the West commercially nearer to one another by thousands of miles, and will thus facilitate the interchange of the products of the opposite sides of the world, and will, no doubt, exert an immense influence in extending and augmenting trade in this ocean.

That Hawaii will be benefitted by the accomplishment of this work there cannot be a shadow of a doubt. It will open for her new markets; it will lessen the cost of importing, and it will place her more directly than before on the routes of international trade,

It seemed to me that at no place could our products be exhibited with better chance of attracting attention and leading to good results than at Sydney, where many adventurous young men, who are seeking for places and opportunities to settle, are sure to be gathered together, but upon examining the prospectuses I saw no intimation that exhibits the prospectues I ask no infimation that exhibits from foreign countries would be welcome, and as no official notification had reached this Department I did not feel that His Majesty's Government could officially invite exhibits to be made under its di-rection. In view however of the advantages likely a easue from such exhibits I wrote Dr. Trousseau that if we could be assured that such would be welcomed by the authorities in charge of the exhibition, I would lay the inster before the Chamber of Commerce and would personally co-operate with the Chamber if it thought best to invite con-

We need men of enterprise and some means to take up the lands of Hamakua, Kan, Kona and others, and raise coffee, sugar and wool. Some triends of mine, members of the Agricultural Society of N. S. W. would very much like to see Hawaii represented at their exhibition, and promise me that every care will be taken of things forwarded and sales if desired, effected at most inversible terms. Is there any chance to see the Hawaiian Government take any interest in the matter, and call for the co-operation of producers. I thought I had better write to you on the subject so that a respectable exhibit might be forwarded by common efforts under your personal patronage perhaps.

If you do not consider worth your while to have anything sent, please be kind enough to let me know at once and I will try to gather some Hawaiian produce or curiosities for the Sydney Exhibition.

LATE FOREIGN NEWS!

He submitted to Stephens the suggestions of Galusha H. Grow that a policy might be adopted to divide the white vote in the South and attach it to the more moderate Republican element in the North. New York, December 27th.—The Tribune, assuming that there is some trath in stories of attempting to compromise the Presidential question by divisions of honors among different contestants, rebukes the tendency in the public mind to accept some such solution. Saying that when a knot of politeians can get together and dispose of the Presidency by dickering, we are only one step from anarchy. Let this scheme succeed once, and it is morally certain that at every subsequent election the defeated party will create complications in order that it may be in a position to make terms with the victors. Then balloting will be a mere form. The Presidency will really be bought and sold. Neither Democrats nor Republicans can henorably agree to any such companies. The votes of the States have been cast. Hawiish Agricultural Company at Rapapais, and at Princeville, Kanal are very great, and I think only want setting forth with an attractive exhibit of what can be raised and statements of the profits of such industries to induce the immigration of some such men to the advantage not only of the estates directly interested but of the community at large.

In Dr. Troussean's second letter, you will observe what he says of the assurances he has that such exhibits will be welcome, and if the Chamber deem it best to invite exhibits and arrange for their transmission, His Majesty's Government will co-operate so far as they properly can.

I trust at least that some of our public spirited planters and property holders will swill themselves of this opportunity to bring into notice the advantages they can offer immigrants.

Berlin, Dec. 22.—Emperor William closed the session of Parliament to-day by a speech from the throne. In reference to foreign affairs he said: The throne. In relevance to foreign affairs he said: The regotiations of the Powers on the Eastern question, as far as proceeded with, justifies the hope that my efforts and the peaceful intentions of the Powers will be successful in solving pending questions. Without prejudice to the good relations existing, Germany will continue, by friendly disinterested mediations, to lend her co-operation for the attainment of this and
